The Symbol of Humanbecoming

This, silver, likeness of the symbol of humanbecoming was designed to signify commitment to the values and beliefs about humanuniverse that underpin the humanbecoming school of thought. The symbol of humanbecoming was inspired by Dr. Parse and originally designed in black, white, and green by Alj Mary for the cover of Man-Living-Health: A Theory of Nursing. The black and white colors were chosen to represent apparent opposites—paradox—which is significant to the ontology of humanbecoming. The green is the color of hope, representing ongoing humanuniverse emergence. The center joining of the swirling ribbons represents cocreation at the ontological level, and the nurse with person and researcher with participant at the methodological level. The combination of green and black swirls intertwining represents humanuniverse cocreation as a seamless symphony of becoming. Copyright, Rosemarie Rizzo Parse, 1981, 1998, 2008.
